

How is a personal prelatore created?

It is the Church itself, represented by the Pope, that makes the decision to create a personal prelatore, after consulting the Bishops' Conferences, in order to serve souls more effectively.

Naturally this decision requires the existence of the elements that constitute a personal prelatore: a community of faithful, presided over by a prelate, with a clergy that assists him in his pastoral task, and a specific ecclesial purpose.

11/27/2007

It is the Church itself, represented by the Pope, that makes the decision to create a personal prelature, after consulting the Bishops' Conferences, in order to serve souls more effectively. Naturally this decision requires the existence of the elements that constitute a personal prelature: a community of faithful, presided over by a prelate, with a clergy that assists him in his pastoral task, and a specific ecclesial purpose.

pdf | document generated automatically from <https://opusdei.org/en-nz/article/how-is-a-personal-prelature-created/> (03/29/2025)