

Monday's Gospel: God Dwells in My Soul

Gospel for Monday in the 5th Week of Easter, and commentary.

Gospel (Jn 14:21-26)

“He who has my commandments and keeps them, he it is who loves me; and he who loves me will be loved by my Father, and I will love him and manifest myself to him.”

Judas (not Iscariot) said to him, “Lord, how is it that you will manifest yourself to us, and not to the world?”

Jesus answered him, “If a man loves me, he will keep my word, and my Father will love him, and we will come to him and make our home with him. He who does not love me does not keep my words; and the word which you hear is not mine but the Father’s who sent me. These things I have spoken to you, while I am still with you. But the Counselor, the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in my name, he will teach you all things, and bring to your remembrance all that I have said to you.”

Commentary

In the intimacy of the Last Supper, Jesus offers his disciples some teachings that seem almost a farewell and last testament.

Jesus first makes reference here to the deep mystery of God's presence in the soul. In the Old Testament, the Lord progressively made himself known to the people of Israel and promised to remain in their midst. This presence was especially signified in the Holy of Holies, the most sacred place in the temple of Jerusalem. Now Jesus announces a new form of presence in each person, so long as we love and keep his word, becoming a temple in which God abides, as Saint Paul reminded the first Christians: "For we are the temple of the living God; as God said, I will live in them and move among them, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people" (2 Cor 6:15-16).

This presence of God in the soul has always fascinated the saints, who have felt urged to correspond to such great love on God's part for his creatures. As Saint Josemaria said:

“The Blessed Trinity has fallen in love with man, raised to the level of grace and made ‘to God’s image and likeness.’ God has redeemed mankind from sin and desires ardently to dwell in our soul.”^[1] —

Are we habitually aware of this deep truth of God’s presence in our soul in grace? Do we strive to respond each day with gratitude, with gestures of affection and adoration? Saint Augustine advised: “God is not really distant. You are the one who makes Him distant. Love Him and He will draw near to you; love Him and He will abide in you. The Lord is near. Do not worry about anything.”^[2] —

God’s presence in the soul cannot be separated from the powerful action of the Holy Spirit. Therefore Jesus makes reference to him here and calls him the Paraclete. This Greek term literally means someone who walks alongside, while he speaks, suggests, and advises. Thus it can be translated as “advocate” and “consoler.” “Advocate” because he intercedes before Divine Justice to obtain forgiveness for our sins thanks to Jesus’ Passion; and also as “consoler” because he alleviates our afflictions with his suggestions.

When we truly strive to follow docilely the suggestions of the Holy Spirit, our soul is filled with peace and joy, sure signs of God’s presence, even in the midst of difficulties. May each of us always have recourse to God present in our soul, as a font of living water where we can quench our deepest thirst, and where we can recover once and again the joy and peace we need to bring everywhere.

^[1] Saint Josemaria, Christ is Passing By, no. 84.

^[2] Saint Augustine, Sermon 21

Pablo M. Edo

.....

pdf | document generated automatically from https://opusdei.org/en-za/gospel/mondays-gospel-god-dwells-in-my-soul/ (12/21/2025)